

SmartGrid News	Survey: Communications More Important to Utilities Than Smart Meters	Dec 02, 2009	http://budurl.com/mercomcicj	Study News
----------------	----------------------------------------------------------------------	--------------	-------------------------------------------------------------------------	------------

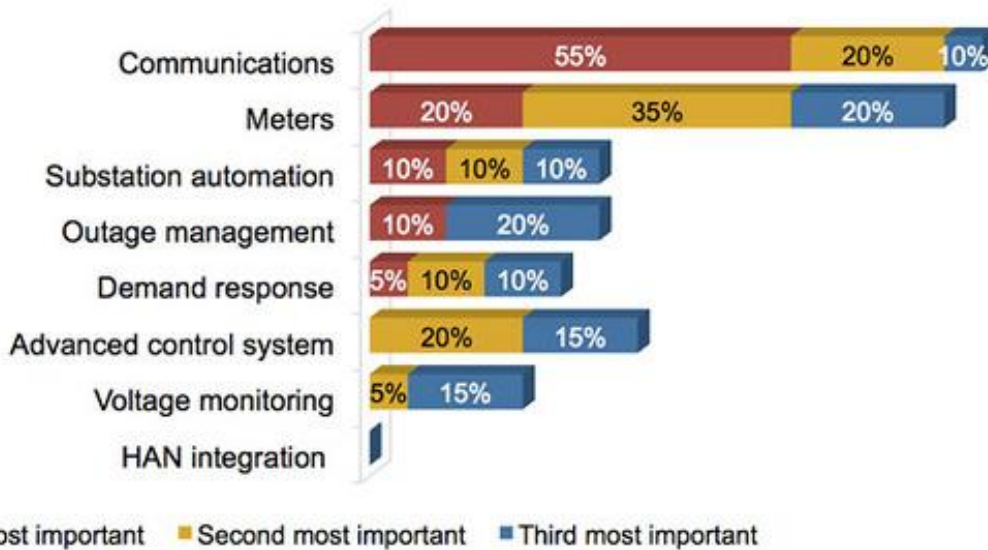

Survey: Communications More Important to Utilities Than Smart Meters

Dec 2, 2009

According to the July Pacific Crest Mosaic Smart Grid Survey, utilities consider two-way communications the most important technology in creating a fully operational Smart Grid. Of the industry professionals surveyed, 60% selected this as their top choice.

Smart meters are also important, but to a lesser extent, with only 15% rating it as most important.

Source: Pacific Crest Mosaic - August 2009

The Pacific Crest Mosaic Smart Grid surveyed industry leaders with budgeting or technology selection responsibilities. The data and information contained in such reports is not intended to be used as basis upon which investment decisions should be made and is not, and should not be considered, investment advice or securities or investment research. For more information on the survey, see the link below.

- About the Pacific Crest Mosaic Smart Grid Survey
- Email Joseph Berger, VP, Mosaic Services
- Email Nat Parker, Clean Tech Sector Specialist

Intelligent Grid Solutions, LLC has been granted permission from MERCOM to post this article as a courtesy and benefit to those who visit this web site. This article appeared in the December 7, 2009 issue of "MERCOC Market Intelligence Report for SMART GRID."

DISCLAIMER: Neither Mercom nor Intelligent Grid Solutions, LLC assumes any liability for the accuracy and/or validity of any/all information contained in this report.

Intelligent Grid Solutions, LLC
6471 East Radcliff Avenue, Englewood, CO 80111
www.intelligentgridsolutions.com or www.gridsrus.com